Called to be prophets who take care of the Kingdom

The Kingdom of Heaven is like 22 bursars who day after day spend time putting numbers in boxes, calling different administrations, going to the bank and answering letters and sisters seeing beyond these very concrete tasks, the growth of the seed thrown into the ground and the beautiful Assumption tree that grows and offers its shade to all those who live and work there.

Everyone knows that whoever has money has power. And yet, we are called to remain humble, at the service of our sisters and charities, to remain in contact and have a close relationship with our teams and our sisters in charge. The money we manage is for the good of all. It does not belong to us. These 10 days of bursar session were a strong reminder of this.

Behind the numbers are life, emergencies, and the demands of the Kingdom of God. Knowledge puts us in a humility attitude, gentleness, foresight, but also professionalism. The world around us must be known. We have our share of excellence and skills to contribute and if we don't do it, who will?

Today, remaining free from power, seeking signs of sharing, listening to the cries of the earth and our brothers and sisters, being cunning in order to have the means to fulfil our mission is to become, to remain and to be prophets in the service of the Kingdom.
